My pottery is functional — meaning it's meant to be used. I focus on form which is key to functional work because handles need to be comfortable, lids need to fit, and bowls and plates need to stack. My work is predominantly fired in atmospheric kilns — gas reduction, salt, and wood. I work with 5-8 different clay bodies at any given time to achieve the vastly different results they produce.

In addition to being a maker, I am also a marketer. Leveraging my vast experience in the public and private sectors, I support a roster of maker & small business owner clients for whom I providing the marketing services needed to achieve their business goals.
